A STREET-CLEANING CONUNDEUM.

THE EVENING WORLD'S investigation of New York's dirty streets has brought to the surface this conundrum: What does way between the Park Row and Broadway Commissioner BEATTIE do? Clever reporters, who have tried hard to solve it. have been compelled to admit themselves the patients that shall enter its wards" and

There is no riddle, however, about the dirtiness of the streets. There should be no question about keep ing them cleaner than they are. They were never so filthy and there was never so much money spent on them. That better work can be done is shown in those streets that THE EVENING WORLD has called attention to, and which have been
